Nov 27th, 1917

Hello! Frances.

Just got your letter. Was thinking of you sending me a letter, when in the door the mail orderly & handed me something I was sure you were going for.

Glad you're not tired. I hope you have rested up. I did. I certainly was tired yesterday, too, right after I came from the barber, I called you up, but Nellie told me you had just left for the library, but will call you up again to-night, before 7 30.

Lenty did receive his orders, and is leaving to-day. He was down to the house last night. You ought to see what a beautiful bouquet of roses he bought for mom. As soon as he leaves, I reckon Rose will be able to come down & see you.

So the folks didn't reach home until early in the "mo'ning"? Well, I'm glad I didn't, and you see, it wasn't a bad idea to have left when we did. I wouldn't mind going to another wedding, myself. I was talking to mom last night about one wedding, & will tell you tonight over the phone. What did Sadie have to say against the affair?

Well, Lutz just came over to me & bade good-by. He is leaving at 11 o'clock.

Take care of yourself, darling; much obliged I'm busy.

All my love to my sweet little wifie,

Lovingly

Jay